Located along the Pacific coast, Hokkaido is the largest island of Japan and the northernmost region of the main island of Honshu. The western two-thirds of the island is dominated by the Kantō region, centered on Tokyo, and the eastern one-third by the Tōhoku region, centered on the cities of Aomori, Iwate, Miyagi, and Fukushima. There are several additional prefectures (such as Nagano and Yamagata, in the north) along Hokkaido's northern border. The island's largest city and capital is Sapporo. The second-largest cities are Asahikawa, Sendai and Obihiro. Hokkaido is one of the four main islands of the archipelago nation of Japan. The island of Hokkaido is part of the larger island of Honshu; it can be reached by trains connecting Tokyo, Shin-Osaka, and other big cities. [1] The name "Hokkaido" translates to "the northern frontier" or "frontier of the north". Hokkaido is renowned for its nature, location and Japanese culture. It has numerous national parks, mountains, rivers and lakes. On the coast, there is an extensive system of beaches. It is also the northern-most region of Japan, encompassing the Kamchatka peninsula in eastern Russia. For the majority of the year, the weather in Hokkaido is milder and milder. The coldest month of the year is January and the hottest August. Hokkaido's population is around five million, and the population of the capital, Sapporo, is around one million. The economy relies on tourism, forestry, fishing and agriculture. Hokkaido is a popular destination for tourism, due to the unique and varied terrain which the island offers. The main seasonal attractions are the mountains, coastal beaches, national parks and forests. In 2004, Hokkaido was ranked the most popular overseas travel destination by the Japan National Tourism Organization. Hokkaido consists of 9 prefectures.
