We describe a patient with hemophilia A (factor VIII = 0.06 IU/ml) and von Willebrand disease (vWD), both inherited from his mother. Treatment with factor VIII concentrate was discontinued because of an anamnestic rise of factor VIII inhibitors and suboptimal control of hemorrhages. Coagulation studies in the proband indicated mild vWD. NovoSeven (r-VIIa), a factor VIIa preparation containing von Willebrand factor and activated factor VII, was administered because of the hemophilia A and the inhibitor problem. The patient received the first three consecutive doses (20, 100, and 80 microg/kg body weight) 2d92ce491b
