The Revenant is a 2015 American western historical adventure film directed by Alejandro González Iñárritu and co-written by Iñárritu and Mark Boal. The film is a co-production between the United States, Mexico, and Canada, and was produced by The Weinstein Company, Emmett/Furla Films, A24, and Bumblebee. It is based on the 1997 novel of the same name by Michael Punke, and is the second installment in a trilogy of films that began with Birdman (2014). A nomadic frontiersman, Hugh Glass (Leonardo DiCaprio), embarks on a journey to fulfill a quest to find his son. The film was screened in the Special Presentations section of the 2015 Toronto International Film Festival, was theatrically released in the United States on December 25, 2015, by Warner Bros. Pictures and by Pathé, and was released in the United Kingdom on November 14, 2016, by StudioCanal. The film received acclaim from critics, who praised its innovative visual effects, soundtrack, script, direction, and performances. It was selected as the Best Picture of the Year at the 73rd Golden Globe Awards, won the Academy Award for Best Cinematography, and was nominated for Best Director and Best Actor, and was also nominated for a BAFTA. There are two 3D versions of the film released in the United States. The first was released on December 18, 2015, and the second on January 8, 2016. When it was announced in April 2014 that the film would be made, some speculated that it would be a Western, perhaps like Clint Eastwood's Unforgiven (1992). Instead, it is a loose adaptation of the 1823 non-fiction novel The Revenant: A Novel of Revenge, written by Michael Punke, who has been credited as the film's screenwriter. Filmed in Argentina, the film was shot in the Iberian Peninsula and the southernmost part of Canada. The script was written by Mark Boal, a producer on Black Hawk Down (1993). Iñárritu was attracted to the project because of the opportunity to make a Western. The first draft of the script was inspired by a conversation he had 2d92ce491b
