A case of a hepatic tumoral mass with biliary fistula in a 60-year-old female is reported. The patient presented with fever, right-upper-quadrant pain and jaundice, as well as moderate ascites and hepatomegaly. The laboratory findings were hyperbilirubinemia, high levels of alkaline phosphatase, gamma-glutamyl transpeptidase and transaminase with lymphocytosis. The level of C-reactive protein was normal. Abdominal CT scan revealed a mass in the right hepatic lobe. A partial resection of the liver led to the diagnosis of hepatocellular carcinoma. This tumor was accompanied by a biliary fistula and a septic liver abscess. Histology disclosed a poorly differentiated hepatoblastoma containing neoplastic hepatocytes with trabecular and pseudotrabecular pattern, arranged in nests and trabeculae in a hepatocellular pattern with a cholangiocellular differentiation. The neuroendocrine pattern was found in a smaller number of foci in nests and trabeculae. The case described highlights the hepatic tumor that clinically mimics liver abscesses. Moratorium on travel bans for people affected by coronavirus Ben Gummer, from Chichester, gets essential equipment from his local shop. As some businesses face coronavirus closures, could travel bans become a thing of the past for the majority of people? Across the UK a nationwide travel ban has been put in place which could stop people needing to use their trip cards to leave and enter the country. A "quarantine" is now in place, meaning anyone affected by the coronavirus will be unable to travel for 30 days. In some cases, if they can prove they have coronavirus, they could remain in Britain longer.
