A: This probably wasn't a programming question, but what you really want is a version of Flowcode for PICs that will actually run on the PIC microcontrollers (series 6/20/30/48/58, etc.). This is a pay for download package (where you pay to buy the microcontroller and download the software). That would be a typical licensing program, which you would then have to register and pay for. If you just want to get a copy of Flowcode for a PIC microcontroller, and you don't care about paying for the extra microcontroller (where you could just download it as a file), then the regular package is probably all you need (assuming you have a newer version than 4.5). You would need to contact the distributor of the PIC microcontroller, and ask them if they offer software for it. If they do, the license is a form of EULA that you will have to agree to before you can download the software. Q: How to add a map/circle on Google Maps that tracks the location of a user's (Android) phone? I know how to make a map/mapview but I don't know how to put a circle around the map. I want the circle to be on top of the map. And when the user zooms in, I want the circle to get bigger and bigger. I found this video, but I couldn't translate it into java. Can someone help me or at least point me to the right place? A: I solved it. You have to write your own draw method to create circles and text. For the circles you have to use this code: private final Paint mPaint = new Paint(); mPaint.setColor(Color.BLUE); mPaint.setStrokeWidth(4); mPaint.setStyle(Style.STROKE); mPaint.setAntiAlias(true); private final Bitmap mBitmap; private final RectF mBound = new RectF(0, 0, 0, 0); private final Path mPath = new Path(); public Paint getPaint() { return mPaint; } public void setPaint(Paint paint) { mPaint = paint; } public void setBound(2d92ce491b
