What's New In AutoCAD?

2D Data Interoperability: Create one-time and recurring 2D barcodes with the latest tools and features. Use one-time codes for frequently used workflows, like authentication, to eliminate errors and limit data entry. (video: 1:18 min.) Data Fields: New data fields make it easier to connect to systems and get data into your drawing faster. Use data fields to capture customer or supplier name, order number, quantity, and more—all with a click of the mouse. (video: 1:21 min.) Faster, Easier Data Entry: Create reusable template data fields that can be used as new drawing templates or incorporated into your drawings. These template data fields automatically populate and format data as you add or copy data, making it easier than ever to create data-rich drawings. (video: 1:32 min.) New Pen Styles: Create more expressive pens by using more than a single color and stroke weight. Now, you can easily create a more expressive pen with a separate color or dashed line and even choose the thickness of the line. (video: 1:40 min.) New Pen Options: If you're looking for increased expression with your pens, AutoCAD now offers more customization options than ever before. For example, you can draw objects in the background of the line or fill the line with a color, and you can now use features like path style, beveled lines, and beveled fills to create more expressive pens. (video: 1:54 min.) New Marking Features: Use the latest marking options to color a shape, create annotative shapes, and apply and edit labeling. (video: 2:18 min.) Labeling Tools: Take your labeling to the next level with revised tools to create and edit labels for objects with your drawing. Use new label rules, beveled lines, rounded corners, text wrap, and more to create expressive labeling. (video: 2:41 min.) Precision-wise, these features and improvements aren't a huge deal, but I do think they're a pretty significant one. How does one day make a huge difference to our workflow? One way is that we often have to deal with additional information or use inputs from our colleagues who might not be trained in our specialized processes. Adding that extra layer of complexity to our workflow can slow us
