Oleg Maev / Shutterstock.com Photo of a fireplace. The first step in creating an image on Photoshop or Elements is to select one or multiple layers. Many layers are hidden by default to save memory. If you want to see them, go to the Layers panel. The Layers panel is available as both a tab in the bottom-right corner of the screen as well as a panel on the left-hand side of the screen. Elements comes with a good palette of colors, but it's quite limited. After you have chosen the desired color, click the Colorize button to alter the color of the image. There are four basic types of strokes: linear, elliptical, radial, and freehand. Freehand is very helpful for graphic designers. To activate it, click the Image menu in the toolbar, then select Freehand Strokes. Photo: buduga / Shutterstock.com Photo of a flower. Now you can adjust the size, color and opacity of strokes. You can also add frames or borders to the edges of the strokes. The Transparency Panel (in the lower-right corner of the screen) allows you to change the opacity of images, strokes, and path frames. You can also create different layer states to apply different effects and effects to different types of layers. Photo: Kim Phan Photo of the Taj Mahal. In the Adjustment Panel, you can add and remove effects to the image. You can add and adjust curves in the Curves Panel (in the bottom-right corner). There are many preset curves, but you can also create your own. There is a Gradient menu and you can create your own gradient, select between linear and radial gradient, and choose the direction. Select the Brush Tool (in the toolbar) and click the Eraser tool (in the toolbar). Choose a round brush that has softer pixels and a hardness of 0 (soft) or 3 (hard). If you make too many changes to the image, always select the area that you want to edit. You can create a smart object by placing the object on a layer above the background, so it will be editable. Now you can make changes to the layer below it. The withering attack on Afghanistan by Boris Johnson, which the British government was forced to defend a day after it was published, is being discussed inside Russia in a way reminiscent of the German reaction after the Allied bombing raids on German cities in the Second World War. “The Anglo-Zionist imperialists are counting on a ‘world war’ ... to pull the wool over the eyes of the international public opinion. I think that in the circumstances, the Russian leadership should adopt as a slogan the following: Never again,” writes the Kremlin-backed Russian news agency Sputnik International. With its general council meeting due next week, the International Zionist Organisation, the official representative body of the leading and mostly staunchly pro-Israel elements of the wider Jewish diaspora, has declared that Russia “remains the world’s largest partner”. The open letter, signed by the chairmen of the Jerusalem Fund, the Jewish Agency, the Israel–Azerbaijan Friendship Association, and the Israel–Moldova Friendship Association, describes Russia as “a formidable economic and political partner for Israel”. The move, which has been endorsed by the International Jewish Anti-Zionist Network, adds to an existing wave of pro-Russian sentiment in the Diaspora after Moscow’s warming of ties with Tehran last year. Boris Johnson was roundly condemned by Britain’s Jewish community for his remarks on the relationship between the two countries. He is expected to meet at least one Jewish leader on his forthcoming visit to Moscow. “Russian-American ties are one of the cornerstone of diplomacy in the modern world. Vladimir Putin and Barack Obama have made every effort to overcome the Cold War legacy and to facilitate contacts between the countries' leaderships," the letter says. The desire of the leadership of the International Jewish Anti-Zionist Network to make common cause with those who share its views is not at all coincidental. In the pages of Sputnik, the Israeli embassy is being described as "a significant partner and ally in international security issues in the 21st century", while Israel itself is described as "an important component of the fight against the 'Islamic terror' threat". The IDF's recent successes in Gaza, as well as the recent fall of Hizbullah's external military wing, are being hailed as evidence of Reflective earmuffs: a useful aid to the hearing aid user. The purpose of the present study is to establish the effectiveness of a new type of reflective earmuff, as a useful aid for hearing aid users. This reflective earmuff is a one-piece unit that incorporates a directional microphone, an amplifier, a small control switch and an FM radio antenna. It is designed for the non-professional and informal hearing aid user who may require ear protection against all types of noise. Effectiveness is established through comparisons of untreated monaural and binaural hearing tests performed over the same environment, using the same device, first without and then with earmuffs, the latter with a reference earmuff. The tests involved a simple verbal presentation of sounds of differing intensities, with results displayed on the listening screen of an audiometer. The new earmuff not only protects the hearing of the non-professional hearing aid user, but also performs reasonably well in reducing the impact of ambient noise and in allowing use of the hearing aid together with a radio. Chernyakhovsk Chernyakhovsk () is a town and the administrative center of Chernyakhovsky District in Moscow Oblast, Russia, located on the shore of the Oka River at the confluence of the Chernyakhovskoye (Chernyakhovsk) Creek and the Oka, west of Moscow. Population: It was formerly a town of oblast significance, but was downgraded to the status of a rural locality. The Oka begins here. A ferry to Poltava (Poltavka) provides a link with the road which leads north from Moscow to Poltava. History

The area of present-day Chernyakhovsk was occupied by the Chernigov Khans' fortified settlement from the end of the 12th century to the end of the 14th century. It was the site of the battle between the Chernigov and Moscow boyars during the Muscovite-Lithuanian Wars. The town was granted town status in the 15th century. From the mid-16th century, the surrounding area was part of the Ponistenov estate belonging to the Sheremetev family. As of the beginning of the 18th century, it was in possession of the Khrushchev family. In the 18th century, it was inhabited by a number of noble families such as the Buranov
